

A WORD FROM THE EDITOR

I am getting ready for my trip to Chicago for Worldcon. I am going to be doing panels and working the Press Room.. There going to be a lot happening. I hope I can write a report quickly on this one.

I did some quick review of some stuff I have seen in streaming.

Then I have to set up my dealers table for Necronomicon.

See you next month.

Quick Reviews

Kenobi– This series looks into the question, "What did Obi Wan Kenobi do between Revenge of the Sith and A New Hope?" Ten years after the fall of the Jedi, we see a discouraged hero. When he hears a call for help, Kenobi rises for the occasion. In the process, he learns about the fate of his friend Anakin. This backstory is interesting since it shows how one recovers from an incredibly devastating loss. (Disney +)

Ms. Marvel – This is a good adaptation of the comic. It liberates the character from the restrictions of the Marvel Comics at the time. Kamala Khan takes the mantle of a working class superhero. I hope the show gets another series after the Marvels film next year. We need more solo adventures for Kamala Khan. (Disney +)

Star Trek: Strange New Worlds—We follow the adventures of the USS Enterprise under the command of Christopher Pike. The production team does a good job of blending the old and new when it comes to look of the show. The stories show the flexibility inherent in Star Trek. One sees social commentary, action/adventure, surreal fantasy, and humor. We get more back story of one of the most beloved characters of the classic era. There is a great balance between serial and stand alone episode series. The human adventure continues. (Paramount +)

Light and Magic—This is a six part documentary of the history of Industrial, Light, and Magic (ILM). The company starts as way for George Lucas to make special effects for Star Wars. From day one ILM has pushed the envelope in the science of film making. We follow the innovations of motion camerad, computer animation, digital effects, and editing. (Disney +)

Severance—The company Lumon pioneers the technology called severance. A chip is inserted into a person brain. When an employee enters their work area, the knowledge of the outside world is cut off. When they leave work they have no memory of the workday. This creates people who only live for work. Lumon has deified its founders, the Eagan family. Some of the workers are starting to crack up. What does Lumon produce? What do the main characters actual do on their computers? Where else will severance be used? The production design looks like 70s office and the technology is in the 80s. The first 9 episodes barely scratch the surface on the questions the show aske. More is needed to full explore this world. (Apple TV)

The Sandman—Dream of the Endless is captured by an unscrupulous magician for over 100 years. After Dream escapes, he goes to find his tools, rebuild his kingdom, and capture a rogue nightmare. This adapts the DC/Vertigo comic and covers the story arcs Preludes and Nocturnes and The Doll House. It is faithful adaptation that changes some aspects for the better. In the adaptation of The Doll House, one is reminded of how so many elements of future arcs including the final story arc are set up so early. We must get an adaptation of the whole series. (Netflix)
